Read the following passages carefully and choose the best answer to each of the questions out of the four alternatives:

Passage-1Question Nos.1 – 3

World peace is defined as an ideal of freedom, peace, and happiness among and within all nations and/or people. It generally includes an idea of planetary non-violence by which nations willingly cooperate, either voluntarily or by virtue of a system of governance that prevents warfare. Today, peace has predominantly become political work towards settlement of issues between the nations through military involvement, cessation of arms and weapons and dialogue on less-violent, civilian matters. Peace has also included some humanitarian efforts that stretch its helping hands to the calamity-hit regions in the world.

Today, governments worldwide have not used much of democratic means to maintain peace, rather bound to display their military character and power to settle down issues that disturbed peace. They often fail to realize the fact that violence erupts at the social level, commutes to the political level and seeking a resolution finally at the military level. Diplomatic efforts have become more so customary and ineffective in front of military powers. The economic status of the nations too plays a crucial role in determining the degree of success of any peace initiative.

1. The definition of World peace as an ideal of freedom, peace and happiness
 - (a) Includes citizens of a particular country only
 - (b) Is reserved for developing countries only
 - (c) Is directed towards sovereign nation states only
 - (d) None of these
2. Planetary non violence, a vision to which many nations agrees upon, strives towards achieving
 - (a) World Peace
 - (b) Peace Treaty
 - (c) Prevention of War
 - (d) World Trade Deals
3. Though the term Peace has now become an idea which encompasses political work towards settlement of issues, cessation of arms and weapons and dialogue on civilian matters, it also includes in its design
 - (a) Providing help to the unfortunate people
 - (b) Assisting disaster afflicted areas
 - (c) Supporting poor nations
 - (d) Distributing aids

Passage-2

Question Nos.4 – 6

Most of contemporary terrorism is not a fight against the armed forces of an opponent; rather it is 'designed' chiefly against civilian targets who ordinarily, according to the rules of land warfare, enjoy immunity from deliberate attack. In this sense, terrorism is a counter value, rather than a counter-force tactic, since civilians not involved in combat are the prime target. They are attacked by terrorists precisely because they are valued! The attack on the defenseless and the innocent is not an unsought side effect but is rather a deliberate strategy of political persuasion, dissuasion and coercion aimed at others rather than the direct victims themselves. It is in this sense that equating terrorism with war is misleading. Equating terrorism with war crimes is more appropriate since the laws regulating warfare are violated as a matter of principle.

If terrorism is conceptually isolated from other, less repulsive modes of conflict behaviour, condemnation by the international community is more likely. A narrow(er) and precise definition of terrorism, in terms of means rather than ends, is likely to find broader support exactly because it excludes more than it includes so that fewer people can find grounds for objection. Such a conceptualization can build on the work of leading scholars in the field of terrorism.

4. Terrorism today targets non military personnel because of their invulnerability towards
 - (a) premeditated assault
 - (b) apposite bother
 - (c) strategic incursion
 - (d) coherent raid
5. The notion of likening terrorism with crimes committed through war is appropriate because it
 - (a) stabilizes the laws regulating warfare
 - (b) promotes the laws regulating warfare
 - (c) infringes the laws regulating warfare
 - (d) challenges the laws regulating warfare
6. Condemnation of terrorism by international community is more likely if it is
 - (a) Appropriated
 - (b) Regulated
 - (c) Incorporated
 - (d) Segregated

Passage-3

Question Nos.7 – 10

The essence of leadership in organizations is influencing and facilitating individual and collective efforts to accomplish shared objectives. Leaders can improve the performance of a team or organization by influencing the processes that determine performance. An important objective in much of the leadership research has been to identify aspects of behavior that explain leader influence on the performance of a team, work unit, or organization. To be highly useful for designing research and formulating theories, leader behavior categories should be observable, distinct, measurable, and relevant for many types of leaders, and taxonomies of leader behaviors should be comprehensive but parsimonious.

Thousands of studies on leader behavior and its effects have been conducted over the past half century, but the bewildering variety of behavior constructs used for this research makes it difficult to compare and integrate the findings. The behavior taxonomies guiding past research have substantial differences in the number and type of behaviors they include. Some taxonomies have only a few broadly defined behavior meta-categories, whereas other taxonomies have a larger number of narrowly defined behavior categories. Some taxonomies are intended to cover the full range of leader behaviors, whereas others include only the behaviors identified in a particular leadership theory. Some taxonomies describe leader behaviors used to motivate individual subordinates, whereas other taxonomies describe behaviors used to lead groups or organizations.

7. If a leader asserts his authority on a process which affects performance it can
 - (a) terminate objectives
 - (b) identify weak links
 - (c) better operations
 - (d) destabilize an organization

8. Achieving common goals, helping individuals and maximizing group coherence is the
- (a) essence of leadership (b) behavioral pattern of a leader
(c) quality of a leader (d) role of a leader
9. Taxonomies of leader behaviors should be inclusive but economical
- (a) in order to save assets and stocks
(b) for designing exploration and devising theories
(c) to check leadership behaviour and quality
(d) to develop new taxonomy
10. Variety of behaviour constructs used for research on leadership behaviour makes it difficult
- (a) to enhance leadership behaviour (b) to find a viable answer
(c) to evaluate leaders (d) to contrast and integrate results

Passage-4

Question Nos.11 – 14

The concept of tax avoidance is somewhat elusive. Whereas some tax structures indisputably fall into the category of “tax avoidance”, there are borderline cases located in the grey area of what is debatable and unsure. It is claimed that to make anti-avoidance legal measures effective, they should be shaped with a measure of vagueness, resulting in an uncertain or not fully determinate ex ante field of their application. Delineating tax avoidance is often a judgmental issue, and the judgment is made on the case-by-case basis. This lack of complete precision is not attributable only to practical difficulties in applying the concept (or legal provisions which express it); it concerns the concept itself.

It is a platitude to say nowadays that the distinction between tax avoidance and tax planning (tax mitigation, legitimate tax arbitrage, etc.) is blurred. What is less frequently observed but equally justified as a claim, this observation holds true also for the demarcation line between tax avoidance and tax evasion. Illegality, typically quoted as a feature possessed by the latter but not the former, is inadequate as a distinguishing criterion, for where there are anti-avoidance legal provisions in force, tax avoidance is, literally speaking, against the law, and can trigger adverse legal consequences for a committer, extending to civil (administrative) penalties. More promising is pointing to the aspect of non-disclosure or misrepresentation, present in tax evasion but not in tax avoidance; however, it does not work smoothly as well since also tax avoiders are “economical with the truth”, e.g. often not revealing the scheme in its entirety, but only piecemeal and only to the extent explicitly required by the legislation.

11. A measure of vagueness, resulting in an uncertain or not fully determinate ex ante field of their application is needed to achieve
- (a) anti-avoidance legal measures (b) tax mitigation
(c) legitimate tax arbitrage (d) law against tax evasion

Directions to solve (Q.nos.49 – 51): Read the following and choose the best answer to each of the questions that follows.

Net income has fallen for the second quarter, and Tluangi is understandably worried. She knows at the board of directors meeting on Wednesday she will be closely questioned and expected to have a plan to avoid any third-quarter losses. Tluangi begins to read slowly over the financial documents to try and ascertain areas that may be the cause. After much consideration, it appears that expenses have risen dramatically over the last few months. Tluangi wonders why. She decides a meeting of the department heads first thing the next morning. At the meeting, Tluangi would like to generate several possible solutions to the increased expenses. She wonders how to effectively explore all the options. At the meeting, the first option that is discussed is to downsize the research and development department since it is not essential for current operations. Several managers approve this plan. Directions for the following 4 (four) passages :

Read the following passages carefully and choose the best answer to each of the questions out of the four alternatives:

Passage-1

Question Nos.87 – 90

The man with the green Benetton shirt and matching socks jostled shoulders with Victor F. He never suspected for even a moment that his wallet had been expertly lifted. He continued on his way, humming under his breath, and Victor crossed the one-way road to a coffee-shop, the proud new owner of a Cartier wallet. Over a chipped plate of samosas, Victor inspected the black wallet. No doubt, his late father – an ex-headmaster – would have been crushed to know that among the other unsavoury things to which he had stopped to earn his daily bread, he picked pockets, but what was Victor – already 29 and penniless and unemployed – to do? He had very few certificates that were worth a second glance and hard toil and sweat was something he had learned to avoid while still in nappies. The wallet gaped open, and his eyes bulged at the sight of the thousands tucked within. Wow! He thought, his illustrious father and samosas suddenly both distant memories. His victim, he decided, had to be a neurosurgeon or a politician – judging from the green socks, probably the latter. Excited, he went through the compartments and found a card. As he removed it, something fell onto the table with a clink. It looked like a door key.

Passage-2Question Nos.91 – 93

“I wish I had a daughter”, mother told him abruptly between a phone call two days back. He couldn’t continue the conversation for a few minutes, and mother herself didn’t try to break the uncomfortable silence with her rumbling about the happenings of the neighbourhood. He hung up the phone, unable to bear the screams of the silence that was all left between him and his mother. He couldn’t sleep the entire night. He couldn’t work in the office. He never expected this of his mother. Mother had exacted a revenge for his ignorance of her feeling. She had punished him for not being there for his father. He was not with him when he lived, he was not with him when he died, he was not with him after his death. Mother was what was left of his father. He was not with his mother. He sent her money every month. He was fulfilling his duties well. But a lot more was expected from him than duties. A daughter he couldn’t be, a good son he was not. He started missing his father. He started missing his stillborn sister. For the first time in years, he cried.

Passage-4

Question Nos.97 – 100

As I write this essay, I am overwhelmed by what human beings can accomplish given time and space. As I look through my window, planes are flying over smoke that lazily ascends from the industries beneath them; vehicles fill every available space along the streets as the news reports another successful rocket launch on its mission to Mars. If only the views of the unborn mind could be trusted, I would have been born centuries earlier. In the current world that is driven by fear over global climate changes, global warming, global economic recession, global terrorism amidst a host of many other global concerns, I cannot help but bury my head in the peaceful moments experienced only during the dinosaur's age. Though that age is considered by many as having been uncivilized and backward, the generations lived in a serene, enclosed and self-contained environment. For example, a cure for most of the human health challenges was at reach within the household's unpolluted gardens and the weapons of mass destruction did not exist.

97. What is the author's feeling in the above passage?
- (a) he is in awe of the modern world
(b) he appreciates what science and technology has done to this world
(c) he mourns the fact that the uncivilized and backward world cannot come back
(d) he is lost in the ancient times when science and technology did not reign
98. What is the topic of the passage?
- (a) The Dinosaur's Age (b) Science and Technology
(c) Mysteries of Science (d) Global Warming
99. Which Global concern is not mentioned in the above passage?
- (a) ecosystem (b) warming of the globe
(c) recession and economic downturn (d) terrorism
100. What is the tone of the author when he says, "As I look through my window . . .rocket launch on its mission to Mars"?
- (a) appreciative (b) pessimistic
(c) sardonic (d) sarcastic
